way way too late Sunday night

Strange Days: Fabulous Journeys with Gardner Dozoys

The price of the Gardner Dozhwa book is $24, not $25 as reported in issue #9.

Bidding News

Irv Koch is bidding for a NASFIC in Chatanooga in 2005.

Connie Willis recovering

Connie Willis is in serious but stable condition in Hahnemann Hospital, after the Short Story Hugo nominees viciously and deservedly attacked her.

People Deleted from Program

Lindalee Stuckey is still unable to attend.

Sunday Evening Party Report

Even though this is Sunday night, the parties tonight showed not the slightest hint of slowing down.

My compliments to the Charlotte party for not smelling as horribly as they have on previous evenings from all the food they've been cooking. Chitzen Itzá and the Midwest Construction Party were both fun and lively. The Midwest Construction Party gets extra points for the Lego™ candy and the excellent sangria.

It seems that the best parties are always thrown by people who aren't running for anything. These are the people who really know how to throw a party because they just want to have a good time. In that spirit, tonight's best party award has to go to the Xerps in 2010 party. I've rarely seen such spectacular room decorations. Xydeco music perfectly fit the mood and the food and party favors were alien. You all need to rush right out and pre-support them.

The Writers of the Future certainly have some amazing plans for very late tonight in room 2139. After the bacchanalia (increasingly frenzied debauchery such as has not been seen at a Worldcon since LACon II), the festivities will climax at dawn on Monday 3 September as they welcome the return of the Sun, L. Ron Hubbard. And the food they are planning to serve would impress even the Boston people.

Christians 0 Lions Fans 6

More Christian teens have been observed crashing Worldcon parties than vice versa.

Apologies

If there is anyone who deserves offending whom we have failed so far to offend, we apologize for their existence.
