

CONCAVE 40

February 21-24, 2019
Bowling Green, KY

GRUMBLES FROM THE CAVE

Greetings Concavers! Whether it is your first or your 40th time we are glad to have you with us to celebrate our big four oh! That's right for 40 years Concave has graced the End of February (and a couple of early March's) with a pop-up Science-Fiction Fandom Utopia. We hope to go for at least another 140 years and to that end we need all of you! I point out here every year that we are an All Volunteer run not for profit convention; this year is no different. So, if you see something that needs doing don't hesitate to step up and help get it done. As Chief Volunteer, a title achieved by taking the garbage out one too many times, I hold no special status. No one here is more or less important than any other. We strive for an environment of safety and equality for all who attend.

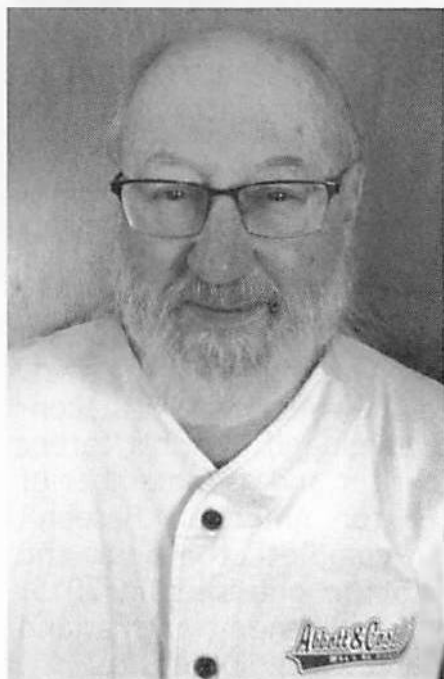

This environment is dependent on the behavior of You, the Members. The world outside of Concave is currently a pretty tumultuous place. Where Politics divide the people and Truth is a matter of perspective. Amid this turmoil and division Concave strives to live by example with kindness and sharing; the heart of any volunteer organization. So be kind to one another. We are all in this together. Remember Cosplay is not Consent. Though some Politicians may have been caught bragging of sexual assault, it will not be tolerated at Concave. We will eject and ban any one who feels they can act "Presidential" when it comes to touching others.

Okay, that's enough scolding (it had better be) lets talk about this year's fantastic fortieth Concave! You may notice as you look through this program book that there sure is a heck of a lot of "non-Programming" for a Relax-a-Con. Welp, you are correct! After some of the fun that was had last year with a few Programming activities several volunteers have stepped up to provide some light programming for this year. Don't worry it won't cost you anything! Like all of Concave's activities and amenities, once you pay for your membership you are good to go. I encourage you to peruse the schedule, check the party fliers, and plan out your personal best Concave ever! We have Art, Five Year Mission, Vendors, Costume Contest, ConSuite, Game Rooms, and Much More! Just like the Roman Numerals for 40 we are ready to have an XL Concave! Thank you for joining us and have a weekend to remember! Just make sure everyone remembers You for the right reasons! Perambulations,

GUEST OF HONOR:

Bill Plott: The Fan Who Got Us Talking

Imagine, if you can, a time when there was no Internet, cellphones, laptops, or tablet computers. Imagine that there was a time when a phone call across county lines was long-distance and was charged by-the-minute. Now, imagine that you are a young person living in rural Alabama who discovered science fiction in the pages of pulp magazines and comic books purchased with scrounged change. The existence of the books proves you are not alone in reading the stuff, but how do you connect with others? That's what it was like to be a fan in the early 60's. The solution was found by many in the world's first chat room: the letter columns of the comics and pulps.

That's where a young Billy Joe Plott discovered the stirrings of fandom in Birmingham, AL. As fate would have it, northern Alabama was home to a group of extraordinary and communicative SF fans. The attendee list from their early gatherings is a roll-call of the Founding Fathers of Southern Fandom: Dave Hulan, Al Andrews, Rick Norwood, John Guidry, Larry Montgomery and Bill Plott. A 1963 meeting of no more than eight is now known as DeepSouthCon 1 held at Dave Hulan's house in Huntsville. One of the most complete and reliable accounts of that meeting was written by Bill Plott.

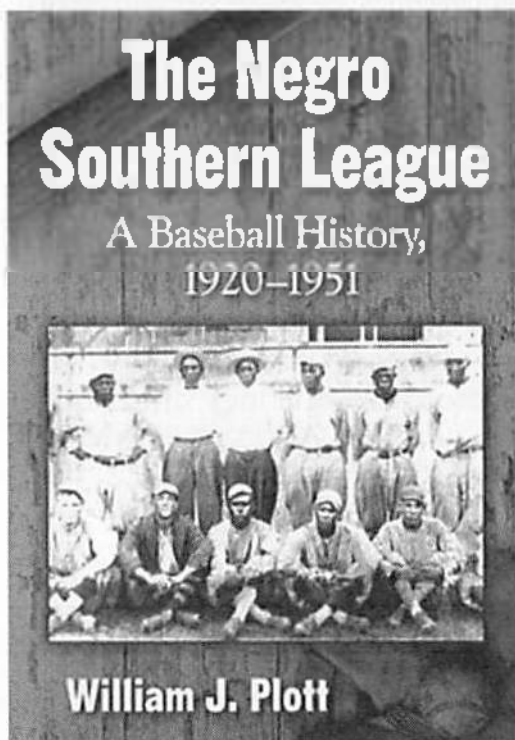

One of Bill's ideas coming from the first DSC was to organize an amateur press association, which he called The Southern Fandom Press Alliance A.K.A., SFPA. An APA is a periodical in which a group contributes their own limited-run fanzines (zines). These publications include fan fiction, commentary, news, artwork, and, vitally, letters of comment on the other member's zines. Under Bill's leadership as its first Official Editor, SFPA membership soon swelled to its membership cap of 32 and generated mailings that could easily top 500 pages every two months. The role of the OE is to collect the zines from the contributors, compile them into bundles for the members, manage the treasury, mediate disputes (some of these are now Fannish legends) collect dues, and send the assembled mailings to the members. The 327th consecutive mailing of SFPA just hit the USPS on February 4th, 2019. Bill Plott is on the roster.

By the end of the 60's Bill had finished college and began pursuing his passions for sports and writing, becoming a sportswriter for the Birmingham newspapers. He also married his lovely wife, Nancy and soon the responsibilities of work and raising a family nudged him out of fandom until retirement and the proximity of DSC 50 in Huntsville in 2013 encouraged him to check back in.

It should also be mentioned that Bill loves beer. He is accredited as a beer contest judge and has kept a beer tasting log for so long he has notes on over 7000 brews he's sampled and over 200 breweries he's visited over the years. (He's not a fan of over-hopped IPAs or heavy porters.) He's taking his RV around the country introducing his Grandson Atticus to camping, travelling, and fandom while seeking out microbreweries and adding to his list.

As an early retirement project, Bill wrote a history of the Negro Southern Baseball Leagues. Writing the book was a race against time. The NSBL disbanded in 1951 and the surviving players and team management was disappearing fast. Bill applied the reporting skills, contacts he'd developed over his career as a sportswriter and as a member of the Society for American Baseball Research to complete the book and turn it in to the publisher in 2015. The book was published by McFarland and is available on their website.

Bill keeps himself active by continuing to participate in fannish writhing and publishing, writing more books on Southern sports history, and attending his grandchildren's sporting events. He recently got to watch his Grandson Jackson Leach go 4-for-4 in kicking field goals in Tuscaloosa for Bryant High School and take Grandson Atticus to Gump City Con in Montgomery. Atticus is getting a good start into fandom. With Grandpa Bill's encouragement he wore a Mandrake the Magician costume to the convention.

It's a great privilege to get to honor one of Southern Fandom's true Founding Fathers this weekend at Concave. Make an effort to get to know Bill this weekend at Concave. He won't be far from the beer taps in The Storm Shelter! You'll find he is easy to talk to, with a reporter's gift for getting you into a conversation! Just watch out for getting into a conversation with him. It just might end up going on for sixty years!

MUSICAL GUESTS: FIVE YEAR MISSION

Five Year Mission barely needs an introduction since this is their fifth straight year in concert at Concave! If you aren't familiar with them yet, this Fantastic Five from Indianapolis takes filk to Warp 8.7 (approximately). The band's mission is no less than to write at least one original song for each of the 79 episodes of Star Trek The Original Series. The result is more fun than a load of tribbles in a Klingon engine room. Noah Butler, Andy Fark, Patrick O'Connor, Mike Rittenhouse, and Chris Spurgin take a collaborative approach to songwriting. Each band member studies the next episode of ST:TOS in sequence for setting to music and develops their take. The band then works on each treatment and picks one best-liked version for inclusion in their magnum opus. So far they've released Year One, Year Two, Year Three, Year Four, The Trouble with Tribbles, and Spock's Brain. Their process blew the dilithium crystals when it came to The Trouble with Tribbles and Spock's Brain. With such fertile material to work with, they simply couldn't pick a favorite, so they recorded a CD for each with songs from all five band members!

A Five Year Mission concert is a high-energy experience. The constant factor is Andy Fark on drums. Noah, Patrick, Mike, and Chris all switch instruments and lead vocalist duties as each song demands. The styles of the songs range from a honky-tonk drinking song for A Wolf in the Fold to angry rock for The Doomsday Machine. The moods vary from the lilting ballad of Friday's Child to savage slash in Miri (Bonk Bonk! Bonk bonk in the head!). It's also possible for a Gorn to show up during a concert. The constant factor is the sharpness and inventiveness of the lyrics with a remarkable ability to both set quotes from the shows to music and tell the stories in their own words.

This year we'll be certain to get a generous serving of new tracks from Year Four. If we're really lucky they may premiere new songs from their work-in-progress on Year Five! The band members always enjoy themselves at Concave, and they're certain to be around to hang out with before and after the show. The energy of the Concave audience really helps to bring out the best in the band, so you're in for a wild ride! - Gary Robe
