Do you like books, thought-provoking panels, and intelligent conversation lasting well into the night? Do you have a special interest in the literature of the fantastic? Do you like good music, good food, and good parties? This is the convention for you!

Fourth Street is a small convention for people who are serious about good fantasy and good books — serious about reading them, serious about writing them, serious about appreciating them in all their various forms. It's also for people who are serious about having a good time. It's two days of high-quality, high-intensity, mind-stretching fun, focused on books — no masquerade, no film or video program, no gaming.

Typical panel topics range from the sublime to the frivolous, from the uses of symbolism in fantasy to the symbolism of shoes in fantasy, from subtext to developing taste. The always controversial Moral Fiction panel is a perennial favorite. Come and argue for yourself!

To pre-register, send your check for $22 to Fourth Street Fantasy Convention, 4242 Minnehaha Avenue South, Minneapolis, MN 55406 before June 1st, 1991, or register at the door for $35. A limited number of tables are available for dealers in books and related items, and limited display space is available for fantasy artists. Please write to the convention for more information.
