This Year's Guests of Honor

Writer Guest of Honor - Stephen Baxter

Stephen Baxter was born in Liverpool, England, in 1957 and now lives in Northumberland. Since 1987 he has published somewhere over forty books, mostly science fiction novels, and over a hundred short stories.

Mr. Baxter's first professionally published short story appeared in 1987, and his first novel in 1991. He has been a full-time author since 1995. He is President of the British Science Fiction Association and a Vice-President of the HG Wells Society.

Science Guest of Honor - Bridget Landry

Bridget Landry was educated as a chemist and planetary scientist, trained as an engineer, and has worked in spacecraft operations for more than 20 years. She has worked on the more than 20 years. She has worked on the Hubble Space Telescope, the joint US-French oceanographic Earth-orbiter Topex, the (wildly successful!) Mars Pathfinder project, and the Cassini mission to Saturn. Ms. Landry is currently a team member of the Dawn mission, which begins a year-long orbital mission at the asteroid Vesta mid-2011, then departs to rendezvous with and orbit the asteroid Ceres in 2015.

Norwescon is a science, science fiction and fantasy convention that takes place on Easter Week each year. We are an all-volunteer organization and always have room for more dedicated volunteers. Without members, though, there would be no reason to hold a convention; thank you for your support.
