

Restaurant List by Location

On the freebie tables you will find Dining, a publication of Madison's weekly newspaper, Isthmus. It includes a map of the downtown and shows selected restaurants — those which feature “dining” (but not the ones which just have “eating”). Our list is sketchier but more thoro.

We've made no real effort to guess at prices, but we do show some closing times. Remember that hours tend to be erratic over a holiday weekend, and places often close earlier than usual on Sundays.

If we've listed a phone number, you should probably call ahead.

“2F” means “2nd floor” (or at least up some steps), a concern for the mobility impaired. (For some reason, you can't find Mexican food on the ground floor.)

All restaurants in Madison are, by law, non-smoking establishments. Bars, however, are not.

This list is organized like a stroll, starting 2 blocks east of the hotel on the Mifflin Street side of Capitol Square, then heading west to the upper end of State Street, thence toward campus. Each intersection along the way will be marked with a “#”, and we'll pause there to glance left and right to see what's in the next block of each side street. A lot of these are 6-way intersections, with 2 cross streets forming the sort of cabalistic symbols you'll remember from The Blair Witch Project.
