FINE CITY!

Baltimore, Maryland -- a new and different convention city anxious to serve YOU.

FINE HOTEL!

Your 25th Worldcon won't be troubled by other cons -- we have the whole hotel; all night bars; a management that encourages private room parties; all for $7.50 to $35.00 (that last is a 3-room suite).

FINE PROGRAM!

An even balance of new and original ideas -- and a Guest of Honor new to the East who'll delight you. He's been long overdue for the honor... -- and partying. Never a dull moment.

FINE COMMITTEE!

No strangers to cons; they've not only attended, they've all worked on other cons. Backed by a most energetic group -- the BSFS.

NO SALE HIGH PRICES — AS USUAL!

That's right, I'm not running a big sale on Odd Tales, and I'm not running a "Going Out Of Business" sale. I've been going out of business since 1948 and now I have 10,000 books and magazines. I figure my widow will have 50,000 to get rid of!

"If you've spent all your money, don't stand there dripping your jelly sandwich all over the stock."

I have about four carloads of these in the Display Room. Magazines ('27 to '66), new and used Paperbacks (most at 3/\$1), new hard covers (some at $\frac{1}{2}$ price), book club hard covers (at 75¢).

Look, why not step over there now and see what I have for sale.

If you should miss me drop a card and I'll send you my free pricelist.

Well, we offer an adventure in con-going:
BALTICON

We've spouted our assets to you often enough. You know by now we have a bid that, from every angle, is unbeatable.

That's where your intelligence comes in.

Be adventurous -- pick the con bid that covers everything; the bid that can be equalled by our competitors in one or two departments -- but never in all, and never surpassed.

PICK A NEW AND DIFFERENT CON CITY
YET WITH EXPERIENCE BEHIND THE CON
-- A NEW EXPERIENCE IN WORLDCONS.

Our symbol is Mr. Poe's raven...but also the power of the atom, and the spaceship.

Our program/party balance will be the most unusual and enjoyable ever seen.

We're certain Mr. Poe would approve.
So does our SF incomparable Guest of Honor.

Mr. Poe will be around, too. He resides permanently just 3 blocks from the con hotel.

SYRACUSE: ARCHIVES FOR SCIENCE FICTION

Syracuse University is becoming one of the most important centers of science fiction activities in the world! Its Library is now an archival agent for many famous writers, editors, etc. in the field. Manuscripts and books are being collected, to be available for research and the general public. The Dean of Library Sciences is a "fan". English Professor George P. Elliott and News Bureau Director Richard Wilson are sf writers. The University Regent Theatre has had a special cinema program for Fall 1965 of "13 Films of Horror, Fantasy (SF) and the Supernatural". Special pamphlets have been published such as an illustrated film program and the "Fictional Accounts of Trips to the Moon", copies of which were distributed at the Pacificon II. This activity, accomplishing what so many sf fans have pleaded for: recognition, dignity, respectability, gives central NY fandom the firm ground for a sf convention which will be tops in fun -- and tops in significance.

Labor Day Weekend, 1966

Dear Fellow Tricon Member --

As you know, New York City is bidding for next year's World Science Fiction Convention (if you don't know, well, we must've been doing something wrong!). This letter is to remind those of you who've been following our campaign, and acquaint you latecomers with the basic points of our position. (If this is all old hat to you, forget the hard sell, skip this ad entirely, and get back to NYCON COMICS, where the sell is soft and well larded with laughs.)

First, let's talk about --

The City

We never tire of talking about Our Fair City -- after all, we live there -- and for good reason. As the largest city in the United States, New York has more to offer almost everyone, no matter how diverse his tastes. (And ghod knows our tastes are diverse enough.) As a vacation city, New York is fabled as a Summer Festival. (As a matter of fact, we'll be supplying the handy and helpful New York is a Summer Festival brochure with our Progress Reports, so that if you wish you can plan a vacation visit in conjunction with your NyCon trip. We will also be supplying maps and street guides as a matter of course.)

The Committee

You'll find the names of our Committee directly above, and we think they speak for themselves. We're a seasoned, experienced group of fans with over sixty years of accumulated experience in fandom to draw on. Between us, we have attended literally dozens of regional and world conventions, and have put on other successful conventions, including the 1965 and 66 Eastercons, in conjunction with the Lunacons of those years. Due to the fact that our science fictional experience and activities are both fannish and professional, we feel we can best serve the interests of both fan and pro attendees at a worldcon -- and we have on tap, in New York City, many, if not most, of the speakers you want to hear and see.

The Hotel

We have a hotel that was actually designed with conventions in mind: the Statler-Hilton, located at 33rd St. and Seventh Avenue, in midtown Manhattan. Now check out these plus points:

1. Flat room rates of $9.00 for singles and $14.00 for doubles. This flat rate entitles any NyCon 3 member to any room in the house at these rates!
2. All convention facilities are on one floor, completely separated from the street and lobby.
3. We'll have exclusive use of the convention facilities for the entire weekend...no high school fraternities will be drowning us out with their rah-rah-rahs, or crashing our parties.
4. The hotel is 100% air conditioned, in all facilities.
5. The hotel is presently being completely remodeled from lobby to rooftop; by 1967 all rooms will be freshly decorated, all hallways newly carpeted, and all convention areas will have new lighting and decor.
6. There are fourteen elevators, for fast, efficient service, day or night.
7. Convention facilities include spacious rooms for the Project Art Show, hucksters, and special displays -- all with limited access, and tight security.

Dear Fellow Tricon Member: 2

8. There will be no compromise on room availability -- the Statler-Hilton has over 2,000 rooms (as opposed to Baltimore's 450).

9. The hotel has direct underground connections with the New York subway system, and with the Pennsylvania Railroad Station (if you come to New York by train, you're there), as well as the all-new Penn Plaza, an underground plaza with shops, restaurants, theaters, and the new Madison Square Garden.

10. The New Haymarket Restaurant, the New Penn Bar, the Fireplace Showcase Lounge, and the Mayflower Coffee Shop are all located within the hotel. In addition, the hotel is located within the most varied restaurant section of the city.

11. The hotel is nine blocks from Times Square, easily accessible to Rockefeller Center, the UN, the Empire State Building, the Theater District, and the other myriad wonders of Our Fair City.

The Program

We've tried to put together a tentative program that combines all the best features we've enjoyed from previous conventions, and eliminates those which annoyed us. Naturally, our likes and dislikes will not agree entirely with yours, but we think you'll find our mixtures of old and new refreshing and stimulating.

Among our other departures from tradition:

Block grouping of program topics. Not only will this lead to a stimulating interplay among the different speakers, it will make it far easier for you to skip those program segments which don't interest you without missing the particular item that you're dying to hear.

Dialogues. Many speakers are overwhelmed by the thought of facing a microphone and a vast audience alone. In the past, this has been dealt with by making up panels. But too many panels sound like too many others, and too often there is so little disagreement among panelists that the resulting "me too"s put the audience to sleep. How would you like to see John Campbell hold a dialogue with Harlan Ellison, though? We don't guarantee it, but that'll give you an idea of what we have in mind.

Controversy. We're pretty sure some of the dialogues we're proposing will be controversial. But we're asking all our program participants to Think Controversial. We want to see our audience stimulated -- not bored. And we think that our program will do it. For the first time in years, the program items may be the main topics of conversation at the parties.

And, finally, we've picked a Guest of Honor whose lively speech will almost certainly be the talk of worldcons to come.

NEW YORK IN '67!

So there it is: our prospectus. We've put a lot of hard work, time, energy and enthusiasm into our bid, and this is only a taste of what will follow if New York City is awarded next year's world convention. Without knocking our competitors, we think our group is uniquely qualified to host the 25th Annual World Science Fiction Convention, and we think that when you check and compare, you'll agree, it's

GREETINGS TO

Friends, we have an apology to make. We had hoped that our two latest books — “The Universes of E. E. Smith” and the revised and enlarged edition of “In Search of Wonder”—would be on sale at the Convention. Alas, it is not to be. Various fell disasters have delayed publication. But of course we will be happy to take advance orders.

Here's what we have in preparation:

THE UNIVERSES OF E. E. SMITH, by Ron Ellik and Bill Evans. This is the definitive concordance, both scholarly and sprightly, to the epic “Lensman” and “Skylark” novels of the late Doc Smith. The Lensman part is done by Ellik — 160 pages of information, serious and otherwise, about science-fiction's most celebrated universe. It's all here — every character, every planet, every battle, from Abab to zyzmol. Here is a tiny sample:

Dekanore VI A non-Tellurian planet inhabited by fantastically ugly, spider-like beings, to whom Kimball Kinnison was a shuddersome sight (SSL 52).

If you have a soft spot in your heart for Kimball Kinnison, you'll want this book. Are you a Skylark fan? Bill Evans has provided fifty pages of definitions and descriptions of the characters and events of the “Skylark” saga. James H. Schmitz contributes a nostalgic introduction, and there is a comprehensive bibliography by Al (West Coast) Lewis. A clutch of appendices round out the text. And not least, we twisted Bjo's arm until she came across with half a dozen full-page interior illustrations and a jacket.

THE TRI-CON!

IN SEARCH OF WONDER, by Damon Knight [Revised and Enlarged Second Edition]. Many of you will remember that Advent had planned a second book of Knight's unparalleled critical essays, but other business prevented Damon from ever completing it. Now, at our urgent request, Damon has revised “In Search of Wonder” and enlarged it by about twenty percent to include all the new material that had been assembled for that ill-fated second book. If you missed the first edition before it went out of print two years ago, here is your chance. And if you did get the first edition, why, then you know how good it was, and you'll want the new enlarged version. The line forms on the right.

"Doc" Smith and First Fandom Award
Presented in 1963 at Washington, D.C.

An earlier and less sophisticated generation of science fiction fans referred to him affectionately as "Skylark" Smith. In later years he was known to his legion of fans as "Doc" Smith. To the mundane world he was Edward Elmer Smith. On August 31, 1965, in the town of Seaside, Oregon, he died suddenly of a heart attack in the seventy-fifth year of his life.

Edward Elmer Smith was born on May 2, 1890, in Sheboygan, Wisconsin. In 1915 he married Jeannie Craig MacDougall. In 1919 he received his doctorate in chemical engineering from George Washington University. Until his retirement in 1957 he worked as a chemist, specializing in cereal products. This, then, is the skeletal outline of a man's life.

But there was another life that ran parallel to that of the devoted family man and scientist -- that of a writer of scientific romances, a spinner of tales of incredible adventures, of gallant heroes, black-hearted villains, strange beings from other worlds.

While we mourn the passing of the man Edward Elmer Smith as we do that of any human being, we, as science fiction fans, mourn even more the passing of that "other" Smith, the spanner of galaxies, the man who gave us the intrepid "Skylarkers," who unfolded before our eager young eyes the wonders of the universe as he transported us around it at fantastic, mind staggering speeds, who later revealed to us the Boskonian menace to Civilization, and chronicled the history of Civilization's counter-thrust against Boskone by the Galactic Patrol, led by that greatest of all spacemen, Kimball Kinnison, the Gray Lensman. It may seem callous to feel a greater sense of loss for the writer than for the man, but the fact is that most of us knew the man, if at all, but slightly, while many of us felt we knew Smith the writer as an old friend for many years.

From the moment his first novel, "The Skylark of Space," appeared in AMAZING STORIES in 1928, Dr. Smith occupied a unique and enviable position in the ranks of science fiction giants: with that one story he became in the opinion of most fans the top writer of the day, and remained so, with gradually diminishing stature, for most of twenty years. The stories published in those twenty years constitute some of the major gems in the diadem of science fiction, and will continue to shine with undiminished lustre as they dazzle new generations of avid young readers: "Skylark of Space," "Skylark Three," "Spacehounds of IPC," "Triplanetary," "Skylark of Valeron," "First Lensman," "Galactic Patrol," "Gray Lensman," "Second Stage Lensman," "Children of the Lens,"

"Skylark" Smith, with one stroke, widened the horizons of science fiction to include the entire macrocosmic universe, convincing editors, other writers, and the fans that interstellar adventures were as legitimate as the more familiar interplanetary romance. He used atomic energy and other, even more awesome energies and rays, with authority and élan: there was seemingly no limit to the range of his scientific imagination. With this first story he ushered in the era of the super-physics yarn, influencing other younger writers, most notably John W. Campbell, Jr., who began writing in 1930 at the age of nineteen, and quite frankly modeled his stories, at least conceptually, on those of the master. As P. Schuyler Miller has said, "They...persuaded their readers that they were revealing the real inner truths of science." In time Campbell abandoned the super-physics form in his own writing, but later, as editor of ASTOUNDING SCIENCE FICTION, he was to publish the greatest of Smith's epics, the mighty "Lensman" saga.

It was inevitable that as science fiction and science fiction fans became more sophisticated a growing criticism of Smith the writer should appear, with the harshest and most brutal indictments coming from fans turned writers and critics. This small coterie of semi-professional critics were no doubt essentially correct in their literary criticisms of Smith's writings, but at the same time they overlooked those elements in his stories that have held continuing appeal to the broad mass of science fiction readers and fans down through the years, the blazing excitement of the stories when read for the first time (and even on re-reading, for some), and the heroic proportions of the plots and characters. What it all boiled down to, though, was that Doc Smith was a teller of tales of a specialized form and he told them in the best way he was capable. If they failed to impress the literati he couldn't have cared less as long as he continued to please the average reader.

As so often happens in the world of literature the critics words were ignored by the reading public and Doc Smith's stories have continued to enjoy high popularity to this day, all of his novels seeing paperback publication, with his first novel, the one most excoriated by the critics, "Skylark of Space," presently into its third printing.

In the summer of 1964 Doc Smith was discovered to have cancer of the lung and shortly thereafter went into the hospital for removal of the upper lobe of the involved lung. Miraculously this tough little seventy-four year old man survived this radical surgery, apparently completely. In December of 1964 I received a letter from him telling me that he was working hard each day on revisions of "Skylark Duquesne" to meet a self-imposed deadline of December 24. In a postscript he added: "Oh, yes -- my November 1st X-ray showed perfectly clear so I don't have to get another until May 1, 1965. I'm not quite back to full strength, but almost."

By the summer of 1965 he was so well recovered that he and his beloved Jeannie felt confident enough to take their annual cross-country vacation trip in their trailer, the Dauntless, to the rugged Oregon coast he loved so well. It was here that he died after seventy-five happy, fruitful years, his loving Jeannie by his side.

Today, as we gather here for the 24th World Science Fiction Convention, let us each in our own way pay tribute to a man who so delighted to attend these affairs, not as one of the legendary names in science fiction, but as a fan. I am sure we shall all miss him.

Basil Davenport by Dave Kyle

Basil Davenport, who died in New York city of a heart attack on April 7, 1966, was one of those rare persons in science fiction -- he was a prominent professional and he was also an active fan. Basil was most known among the professionals and fans of the New York Metropolitan area, particularly in connection with the Hydra Club. He had been interested in science fiction prior to the 1940s, but it was after the formation of the Hydra Club that Basil became well known to us. Shortly after Fred Pohl and I started Hydra, Fletcher Pratt became a member and introduced his friend, Basil, to the group. It was a very happy relationship. On many occasions it was Basil's Manhattan apartment which became the evening's meeting place for the club. It was amply large, fascinatingly furnished, filled with stimulating people and had a romantic view from the iron balcony of the lighted spire of the Empire State Building. Basil Davenport's most important position in the world of letters was for ten years as one of the five members of the Book-of-the-Month Club's Editorial Board -- a fact that many s-f fans surprisingly did not know. Holding degrees from Yale and Oxford, he taught classics at Rutgers before joining the SATURDAY REVIEW OF LITERATURE and then starting his thirty-year-long association with the book club. As one of his friends says: "The variety of his talents was staggering -- he was a Greek and Latin scholar; teacher, author, editor, translator, lecturer; amateur boxer, mountain-climber, skier and canoeist; an expert of science fiction and ghost stories. During the war he served in the Army Intelligence Corps as a 'cloak-and-dagger boy' -- his description -- in England, France and Germany." And, of course, an outstanding s-f anthologist, although his published collections could never do justice to his phenomenal memory. But the outstanding thing about Basil, besides his erudition, was the warmth of the man. He was huge in body with a voice to match, red-faced and sandy-haired, and emphatic in his expression of every profound or humorous mood. Yet this explosive, brusque man was a shy man, generous, kind and happy. His speech was distinctive, accented like a Britisher's, but he was proud to correct the idea by saying indignantly, "I learned, Suh, to talk this way in Louisville, Kentucky," where he was born in March 7, 1905. As Ronald Mansbridge (of Cambridge University Press) says: "Basil Davenport was a scholar and he was a gentleman."

I WAS AT THE 13TH IN 1955, HOPE TO SEE Y'ALL AT THE 24TH IN 1966.

GREETINGS!!

WEYER

L. Sprague de Camp

by Andre Norton

It is very seldom that an author can enter more than one field of writing and be not only competent, but outstanding in all. L. Sprague de Camp, Honor Guest of the 24th World Science Fiction Convention, must be labeled unique on the subject and quality of his published works. With Fletcher Pratt as a collaborator, he enchanted fantasy fans with those pseudo-literary, always humorous adventures of Harold Shea, the "Incomplete Enchanter," in the series which began with the volume of that title.

In WHEELS OF IF he produced one of his sprightliest of alternate world tales, a theory he dealt with at greater length and very cleverly in LEST DARKNESS FALL.

Turning to galactic exploration, he then wrote the Viagens series; as well as ROGUE QUEEN, one of the first science fiction books which dared to deal pleasantly and cleverly with sex (a hitherto taboo subject).

His own TRITONIAN RING stands well to the fore in the heroic sword and sorcery field. And his editing and additions to the Conan books leaves all fandom greatly in his debt.

Sword and sorcery has become a subject for Mr. de Camp to speak on with words of authority. His essays in AMRA on such subjects as the proper weapons with which to equip a hero should be required reading for all would-be writers in this field. Just as his excellent SCIENCE FICTION HANDBOOK is a guide, not only for fledgling writers, but also for fans who are interested in the research and work which lies behind any book on their favorite subject.

Recently Mr. de Camp's interest in history has led him to put on paper such vivid pictures of the classical world of the past as ELEPHANT FOR ARISTOTLE (who can ever forget the shrewd and capable young officer who had to march that beast home from India?); DRAGON OF THE ISHTAR GATE, and BRONZE GOD OF RHODES with its meticulous details about the engineering problems of erecting the colossus.

These are all fiction, but with factual history Mr. de Camp is as adroit. LOST CONTINENTS is an outstanding compilation of all the historic legend concerning Atlantis, as well as a review and listing of most of the major fiction on that fascinating subject. And, even more recently, have come such excellent reference volumes as ANCIENT ENGINEERS, ANCIENT RUINS AND ARCHEOLOGY (with Mrs. de Camp), SPIRITS, STARS, AND SPELLS.

To combine such a diversity of skills is unusual, but to do so with honest scholarship and sound research, and yet a diverting sense of humor and touch far from pedantic, is genius indeed.

Mr. de Camp has fashioned his own legend in his own time. Recognition of that from his enthusiastic and devoted readers comes now as it should.

Don Ford

by

Stan Skirwin

On April 2, 1965, Don Ford died of cancer after two operations and a short illness.

Don was an amateur fan in that he never got into the commercial end of science fiction either as a writer or an editor, but he was a great fan by any criterion one might name.

Don grew into fandom in the early thirties with his boyhood friend Roy Lavender. They were in contact with other midwest fans of the period both in person and through correspondence and fanzines. Following his service in the Air Force during the Second World War, Don came into contact with other Cincinnati fans in early 1947 in what eventually became the CFG, the Cincinnati Fantasy Group.

The Torcon, in 1948, marked Don's entry into national prominence when he returned from Toronto with the 1949 Worldcon bid. As secretary-treasurer, Don corresponded monumentally and performed a lion's share of the labor that went into the creation of the 1949 Cinventon which was widely hailed as the biggest and best science fiction convention up to that time.

After Doc Barrett called together in 1950 the first gathering of fans which grew into the Midwestcons, Don became the prime motivator for the annual affairs, terminating with reminders from his deathbed of incomplete arrangements.

Don was an originator or major participant in many significant firsts in fandom. He was one of the proposers of the "Books for Britain" plan under which $150 worth of U.S. books and magazines were purchased with part of the proceeds from the 1949 CInvention and sent to England. He was a founder of TAFF, the Trans-Atlantic Fan Fund which first, in 1955, financed the trip of Ken Bulmer to the Clevation. Don won the TAFF election in 1959 and went to the London Easter weekend convention in 1960. He participated in the organizing of First Fandom in the late 1950s and was active up to the time of his death.

In 1956 Don became a member of OMPA, Offtrail Amateur Publishing Association, and began publishing the fazine POOKA, thus completing the spectrum of fan activities.

These facts of Don's fannish life are reasonably well documented and fairly well-known. Less widely known is that he was also a solid, responsible citizen in the best sense of the phrase. He was an active member of the Air Force Reserve and of the Veterans of Foreign Wars for many years. He participated actively in union affairs at the Autolite plant where he worked for years and was a member in turn of the Grievance and the Bargaining Committees. He campaigned actively and successfully to have railroad crossing signals installed near his home.

After approximately fifteen years as an auto bumper electroplater with the Autolite Corporation, Don became an insurance agent when Autolite closed out its electroplating operations and sold the factory. He brought to his new job as insurance agent the same qualities of communication and human warmth which had made him such an outstanding fan and was one of the top agents in his office during the four years that remained of his life.

Don always displayed a genuine interest in people that marked his fan life and his daily life. Although he had no sympathy toward and expressed contempt for the phonies and the clods (people who are insensitive to the feelings of others), he was always interested in new people and new personalities. One of his greatest delights at conventions was to meet someone who would become in subsequent years one of the people whose presence so enhanced the enjoyment of the conventions.

Don lived only forty-four years, but his was a full life that enriched the lives of his family and of an international circle of friends.

The world as a whole is a better place because Don Ford once lived here; the world of science fiction fandom was greatly enriched.

He is missed.

Words and music: John Brunner

The musical score is written on four staves in G major (one sharp) and 4/4 time. The melody is simple and rhythmic, with a mix of quarter and eighth notes. The lyrics are printed below the staves, with some words in italics. The score ends with a double bar line.

1 Now when I was a lit-tle lad With a pen-ny in my poc-ket, I thought it would be aw-ful good To ship aboard a roc-ket! Oh who would roam a-way from home A-mong the stars so cru-el In an old tin tub where there's lousy grub And a chron-ic lack of fu-el?

- 1 Now when I was a little lad
 With a penny in my pocket
 I thought it would be awful good
 To ship aboard a rocket.
 Oh who would roam away from home
 Among the stars so cruel
 In an old tin tub where there's lousy grub
 And a chronic lack of fuel?
- 2 One fateful day I stowed away,
 It was on a Mars-bound freighter.
 Our planetfall missed Grand Canal -
 We crashed into a crater.
 Oh who would roam away from home
 In a sort of squirting scooter
 With its jets askew and its hull cracked through
 And a fault in the computer?
- 3 On Jupiter there's no good air,
 And there's gravity to flatten -
 There's horrid things among the rings
 Around the planet Saturn!
 Oh who would roam away from home
 And company that's human
 In a beat-up crate with a schizoid mate
 And about ten crazy crewmen?
- 4 I ought to list the filthy mist
 That surrounds the planet Venus -
 It wears its cloud like a bloody shroud
 And heats up like a greenhouse!
 Oh who would roam away from home
 And atmosphere that's pu-ure,
 Share his oxygen with a dozen men
 Till it stinks worse than a sewer?
- 5 Now to my cost from Pluto's frost
 Back to Sol I've spanned the System.
 No cosy berths exist but Earth's -
 Or if they're there I've missed 'em!
 Oh who would roam away from home
 And live his life a rover?
 If again I were just a free young-star
 I'd do the whole lot over!

Dear Mr. White:

New York is the nation's finest convention city.

It has all the necessary facilities for your meeting, as well as hundreds of unique offerings for the entertainment of convention delegates in their non-business hours.

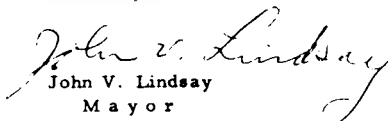

The live theater, scores of first-run movie houses, restaurants of every culinary persuasion, the world's largest and finest museums -- all these and more are available to each member, family and friend of the World Science Fiction Association.

New Yorkers look forward to greeting the Science Fiction Association meeting in 1967.

We'll see that you accomplish all of your business aims but we'll also see that you'll have a good time. That's part of life in New York City.

Best wishes.

Sincerely,

John V. Lindsay

April 18, 1966

Dear Mr. White:

On behalf of the people of the State of New York, I am delighted to extend to the World Science Fiction Association a most cordial invitation to hold its convention in New York City in 1967.

The enclosed brochure, describing the outstanding facilities available for your group in New York, speaks for itself. You may be assured of the interest of the State government in cooperating with your organization and of the friendly welcome you will receive in our State.

In the event that you come to New York, I hope as many of you as possible will take the opportunity to visit our State's many interesting historic sites and areas of unsurpassed natural beauty.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Nelson A. Rockefeller".

The MIT Science Fiction Society's INDEX to the S-F Magazines, 1951-1965

Here it is at last! This second edition of the MITSFS Index has been completely revised, corrected, and expanded. It now contains over 50,000 entries, covering almost all English language SF magazines, including an author index, a title index, and an index by magazine and date. Printed offset and hardbound, it consists of 207 pages of half-pica type (information equivalent to 828 pages of normal type). Get it for only eight dollars at our booth at the Tricon, from your dealer, or from the Treasurer, MITSFS, W20-443, 77 Mass. Ave., Cambridge, Mass. 02139. And don't forget...

BOSTON IN '67

Helmuth

SPEAKING FOR

Boskone

Seriously, now, consider what Boston has to offer: enthusiastic fen; a historic city; a friendly, cooperative hotel; a bid supported by ALL THREE Massachusetts science fiction clubs.

BOSTON's enthusiasm is real--nobody had to come to us and ask us to put on a bid. BOSTON is a new city, with new ideas and a fresh outlook.

BOSTON doesn't claim to be the only good city in the East, nor do we concoct stories about our opponents and spread them throughout fandom. We do claim that a record of two successful regionals (with a third coming in October) is more concrete than vague mutterings about "experienced fen." We do claim that the support of ALL fan groups in our area is more useful than "leading fen endorse..." And we do claim that a Worldcon in BOSTON, with a talented and deserving guest of honor, will be well worth attending.

So, consider BOSTON. Talk to our omnipresent agents, read our blurbs, and, at the business meeting, give the 1967 World Science Fiction Convention to the enthusiastic fen of BOSTON.

"THE AMATEUR MAGAZINE OF FANTASY"

Who printed the first new Seabury Quinn story in many years? Magazine of Horror with "Master Nicholas?" None -- look again. That story appeared first in MIRAGE. Quinn is just one of the many talented people, old favorites and brand new talents for the future, that submit stories and articles -- even bibliographies -- to MIRAGE. You never know when MIRAGE will appear -- next week? Maybe. Or maybe next year. Only when a sufficient quantity of quality material for the fantasy fan is available. We sell at 3/$1.00, and we sell too fast to ever have back issues. Now in our 7th year.

WE ALSO PUBLISH BOOKS -- among them THE INDEX TO THE SCIENCE-FANTASY PUBLISHERS, a complete bibliography (incl. artists, contents, even variant editions) of the SF specialty houses from Arkham House to the Milwaukee Fictioneers. Paper, $5.00. A hardbound version will appear soon...but in very small quantity.

ALSO AVAILABLE: MIRAGE ON LOVECRAFT, an autobiography & 2 critical essays by HPL, a Dr. Keller attack and Darleth defense. Paper, $2.50.

MANY MORE SPECIALTY ITEMS PLANNED. Write:

DEAD

A few days before we went to press with the Tricon Program Book we received notice from Sam Moskowitz that Dr. David H. Keller had passed away on July 13th as the aftermath of a gall bladder operation.

Preparations were underway to award Dr. Keller the FIRST FANDOM AWARD and Sam had been chosen to deliver the appreciation speech.

The Grand Old Man Of Science Fiction - who had pleased many of the early fans with his stories - will be missed.

HAVE YOU A QUESTION?

In slightly less than a year, the Questions and Answer columns in Lore have become two of the most valuable and avidly read features in any fanzine being published today. Here, the collector or scholar can pose questions dealing with science fiction, fantasy, fandom, books, magazines, writers, stories (ever have a title bug you because you just couldn't recall what it was?), radio shows, fantasy films—in short, the million and one facets of this urge to collect as it borders, however remotely, on fantasy—with assurance that a wide audience of experts and collectors will read their questions and perhaps supply a long sought answer.

In addition, Lore presents special collector-oriented book reviews, indexes and articles. It publishes T. G. L. Cockcroft's Corrections and Addenda to the Index to the Weird Fiction Magazines; detailed indexes on the old magazines that have not previously been indexed. Contributors to Lore include: Cockcroft, Robert Bloch, Don Tuck, Edward Wood, Sam Moskowitz, Vernell Coriell, Jerry Burge, Reginald Smith and Camille Cazedessus. All this with a neat format, good art and a lively editorial outlook. Collecting is more fun and much easier with Lore.

Subscription rates: 3 for 50¢; 8 for $1.00, from Jerry Burge 1707 Piper Circle, SE, Atlanta Ga 30316, USA.
