This directory is a bibliography, international in scope, of amateur publications in certain subject fields, including science fiction, fantasy, comix, movies, and wargames, as well as other overlapping interest areas.

This is not the place to define 'fanzine' or explain fandom. That has been done well (for sf fandom) in The Neofan's Guide and The Filled Fan Dictionary. This is only a comprehensive listing of fanzines that were published during 1975. I have operated on the principle of when-in-doubt-put-it-in. Thus many magazines are listed with the notation 'semipro.'

The directory is not limited to publications I have seen a copy of. I am well aware of the reasons for limiting a bibliography to items that the compiler has seen, but in the interests of completeness I have included information gathered from fanzine reviews and other sources. The fanzines that I have personally examined are designated by an asterisk at the end of the entry, to indicate that that information is probably more reliable.

Apas (amateur press associations) are not listed here, because that field is already covered in South of the Moon (now edited by Andrew Sigel, 424 Greenleaf St, Evanston, IL 60202). Individual apazines are listed only if they are regularly circulated outside the apa, or if they are distributed in more than one apa, or by mistake. Libertarian publications are not listed unless they have an appreciable circulation in sf fandom.

The format for each entry is as follows:

code NAME OF FANZINE (numbers of issues published in 1975; status at end of 1975) mailing address (price and other availability) avg pagecount pagesize/method of
- reproduction (editor and publisher if not given in address; other bibliographic notes; brief statement of contents, format, or coverage)

For booklets and oneshots, the author's name is given before the title.

Frequency of publication is not given, because the number of fanzines that stick to a regular schedule can be counted on the fingers of one mutilated mutated hand. An estimate can be obtained from the number published during the year.

Fanzines which ceased publication in 1974 have only that fact listed. When the same editor publishes more than one title, his address will be listed under one and a cross-reference will be given in the others. If there is no cross-reference, check the index for other titles from the same editor.

The main listing is followed by an index of titles, former titles, abbreviated titles, co-editors, and sponsoring organizations. After that is a list of zines that came to my attention after the main listing was typed, then abbreviations.

Please note this correction: unstarred British zines whose page size is given as q are actually s. Where no size is given on starred zines, it is s.

Corrections and additions are desired. A supplement containing corrections will be published about October, and will be available for a SASE or information.

It is planned to publish the Fanzine Directory annually. The 2nd edition will be published February 1977. I have already decided several things that will be done differently. Constructive criticism will be given careful attention. Emotional tirades from people who didn't bother to read this page will be slowly composted in my correspondence file.

Thanks are due to Fred Burkhardt, Donn Brazier, Steve Sneyd, Lester Boutillier, Kurt Erichsen, Jim Meadows, Mark Bernstein, Mark McGarry, Mark Montchalin, and Rick Loomis for providing information. The directory would not be nearly as complete without the fanzine reviewers who brought new zines to my attention in their columns: Ned Brooks, Roger Sween, Don Miller, Darroll Pardoe, Peter Roberts, Heade Frierson, Claude Plum, Eric Batard, and many others.Bifwst publication #158
