READ THIS INTRODUCTION

This book is a bibliography of one year's production of fanzines--amateur publications dealing with science fiction, fantasy, comix, movies, wargames, and other overlapping interest areas. Fanzines are not "little magazines" in the usual sense of the term, altho the categories do overlap. For further information on fanzines and fandom, see The Neofan's Guide.

The coverage of the directory is world-wide, including titles in languages other than English. A supplement includes fanzines which were not published in 1976 but for which tentative plans were announced; by the time this directory is published, some of these titles may have already had half a dozen issues.

The directory is not limited to publications that I have seen a copy of. I am well aware of the reasons for limiting a bibliography to items that the compiler has personally examined, but in the interests of completeness I have included information gathered from fanzine reviews and other sources. The fanzines that I have seen myself are marked by * at the end of the entry. The information on these is probably more reliable.

The directory covers only the year 1976, and notes about the status of titles refer to the end of 1976. Changes in 1977 are not included, except addresses. Compilation was completed in summer 1977, and every effort was made to have the addresses up to date at that time. A smaller number of corrections have been made since. The compiler will be glad to answer specific requests for more current information (be sure to include a SASE or IRC). The 3rd Volume, for 1977, will be published in several months.

The directory does not include professional publications, convention progress reports or program books (unless they have articles), or publications composed solely of house ads. Apas and apazines are not included (except apazines that have a wide circulation outside the apa), because they are covered in South of the Moon (now published by Lester Boutilier / 2726 Castiglione St / New Orleans, LA 70119).

The listings in the directory are not advertisements; the fanzine publishers have not paid or requested to have their publications listed. When a title is listed, that only means that at least one issue was published during 1976; it does not guarantee that future issues will be published. The compiler does not guarantee that prices are current.

The purpose of the Fanzine Directory is to provide a bibliographic record of fanzine publishing during the year. This is needed because no single source has extensive information on current fanzines since Ned Brooks (It Comes in the Mail) and Irvin Koch (Maybe) stopped reviewing and listing fanzines. As a rough estimate, only about 3% of the titles in volume 1 were listed in Ulrich's International Periodicals Directory, and that source includes titles that are several years defunct.

In deciding which publications are fanzines and should be included in the directory, I have made much use of Don Markstein's functional definition: "A fanzine is a magazine that I get in the mail in trade for my fanzine." Serial publications are classified as semiprofessional or fully amateur. A semipro zine is one which aspires to professional status, or which pays some of its contributors, or whose publisher intends to earn part of his living from it. The semipro category has not been used for books and oneshots, due to the different nature of their distribution.

The information included for each fanzine is: title, publisher, price and other availability with foreign agents, subjects covered, editor if different from publisher, variant titles, and other notes. Addresses are in a separate section.

Please note that the currency symbols $ and F mean the currency of the publisher's country. For example, if the price of a Canadian fanzine is given in $, that is Canadian dollars, not US dollars. When ordering a foreign fanzine, send to the agent in your country if there is one. If a publisher gives prices in other than his own currency, that is generally cash only. Most fan publishers accept unused postage stamps or International Reply Coupons (1 IRC = 20¢US or 10p). If a fan publisher states that he will not accept checks in his own currency, then no price is given here. Cash is always mailed at the sender's risk.

Frequency of publication is not given, because you could count the regularly-published fanzines on your fingers, even if you've had a bad accident with a power saw.

Entries are arranged alphabetically. Serial publications are entered by title; books and oneshots are entered by author or editor. Titles that were not published in 1976 are in a supplement.

There is an index, with entries for publishers, editors, alternate titles, and co-editors. Books that were entered by author in the main list are indexed by title, not by author. Possibly some serials were misclassified as oneshots or vice versa, so look in both the index and the main listings.

Corrections and additions will be appreciated and acknowledged, as will suggestions for improvement in the format of volume 3. A list of corrections might be published in a few months; it would be sent to those who supply information and to my regular mailing list, and would also be available for a SASE or an IRC. Or corrections might be listed in volume 3.

Thanks are due to Steve Sneyd, Niels Dalgaard, Peter Roberts, Marc Ortlieb, and Graham Poole for providing information. The directory would not be nearly as complete without the fanzine reviewers who brought new zines to my attention in their columns: Keith Walker, Ned Brooks, Terry Whittier, Barry Hunter, Jan Van Genechten, Norbert Spehner, Eric Batard, Meade Frier-son, Irvin Koch, Donn Brazier, Mike Glicksohn, and many others.
