Mayor David Dinkins City of New York April 18, 1994

Dear MR. MARK R. LEEPER,

An examination of our database shows that although you are a New Jersey resident you charged $23.37 at the Broadway branch of Tower Records. Hence New York City had an opportunity to play host to you on that date. We are very pleased that you chose our city for your visit.

As you probably know, New York City is currently having a fiscal crisis. Our residents are already highly taxed to pay for running our city. As a resident of OLD BRIDGE, NEW JERSEY, you pay you taxes to NEW JERSEY and enjoy the benefits of New York City absolutely free and _ g_ r_ a_ t_ i_ s. And it is our pleasure to serve you and to keep you safe while you are in our city. Now is the time to show your appreciation. Your tax-deductible contribution to New York City will be used to improve our city and to keep it the kind of place you want to visit.

Yours truly,

Mayor David Dinkins

SIDESHOW by Sheri S. Tepper Bantam Spectra, ISBN 0-553-56098-0, 1993 (1992c), $5.99. A book review by Evelyn C. Leeper Copyright 1993 Evelyn C. Leeper

All this is prefaced, in a manner of speaking, by a sequence on near-future Earth in which a pair of joined twins are born whose destiny is to save humanity. They eventually end up on Elsewhere, where the inhabitants--who are all that remains of humanity after the rest were taken over by the Hobbs Land Gods--are being threatened by an unknown adversary. However, I found their story during their time on Earth more interesting than that of the threat to humanity and the digs at various groups on the near-future Earth more convincing than those directed at the societies on Elsewhere. When one sets up a fictional society for the purpose of satire, it's too easy to leave the reader feeling the deck has been stacked.

For me,  $_$  S $_$  i $_$  d $_$  e $_$  s $_$  h $_$  o $_$  w suffers from this and from the same flaw I saw in  $_$  G $_$  a $_$  t $_$  e $_$  t $_$  o $_$  W $_$  o $_$  m $_$  e $_$  n' $_$  s $_$  C $_$  o $_$  u $_$  n $_$  t $_$  r $_$  y $_$  a $_$  n $_$  d G $_$  r $_$  a $_$  s $_$  s: a tendency to preach. I can't say this is a bad book, but I can't recommend it either.

DAVE A film review by Mark R. Leeper Copyright 1993 Mark R. Leeper

Capsule review: This is an old plot dusted off and given some new life and a little bit of political bite. Kevin Kline plays a double for the President who is asked to be President. The film is pleasant with a few emotional moments. Rating: high +1 (-4 to +4).

The basic concept of the plot is an old and familiar one. A commoner looks just like a famous person and suddenly finds he must replace that person. Coming up with examples is almost a trivia game itself: T h e P r i n c e a n d t h e P a u p e r, T_ h_ e_ P_ r_ i_ s_ o_ n_ e_ r_ o_ f_ Z_ e_ n_ d_ a,

Robert Heinlein's D_ o_ u_ b_ l_ e_ S_ t_ a_ r, K_ a_ g_ e_ m_ u_ s_ h_ a,

M_ o_ o_ n_ o_ v_ e_ r_ P_ a_ r_ a_ d_ o_ r. If you want to press the point, there's also R_ e_ t_ u_ r_ n_ o_ f_ M_ a_ r_ t_ i_ n G_ u_ e_ r_ r_ e and S_ o_ m_ m_ e_ r_ s_ b_ y. The underrated science fiction film _ Q_ u_ e_ s_ t_ f_ o_ r L o v e treats some of the problems of standing in as realistically as many films more grounded in reality. Many of the recent body-switch films also treat the subject. Of course, to make one of these stories believable the writer has to come up with some contrivance as to why the shape of the ear does not give the imposter away. As Sherlock Holmes correctly points out, the shape of an ear is as unique as a fingerprint. Certainly somebody photographed as often as the President of the United States is could not long be replaced by an imposter. However, that is the premise of _ D_ a_ v_ e.

Dave Kovic (played by Kevin Kline) is an exact look-alike for President Bill Mitchell (played by guess who?). Dave runs a small temporary employment office and occasionally picks up dollars impersonating the President doing things like riding a pig at places like local car dealerships. Then one day the Secret Service shows up in Dave's living room asking Dave to impersonate the President at a social function. (Even this seems very implausible in a world where one wrong comment can ruin a politician's career.) The President is needed elsewhere. The elsewhere is an illicit tryst with one of his aides, and unfortunately the President suffers a massive stroke. At the urging of two aides (played by Frank Langella and Kevin Dunn), Dave agrees to continue his role as the President.

Dave quickly finds out that President Mitchell was nobody to admire. A small group of people are running the Presidency for power and greed. Finding that the First Lady (played by Sigourney Weaver) detests the President, Kovic decides to change policies.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of _ D_ a_ v_ e is the performance of Frank Langella. Getting past the age when he can play dashing roles such as Zorro and Dracula, he is turning to acting. In a bleached crewcut he quietly steals scenes from Kline and Weaver. He has learned the difference between acting hammy and having an expressive face. Like Frederic March before him, he has made the transition from depending on his good looks to having an expressive face that is a study in itself. It seems even director Ivan Reitman underrates the power of Langella's acting. In one notable scene Reitman has the camera focused on Kline in the foreground. He then sets the focus deeper to pick up a reaction from Langella in the background, then again focuses on Kline to give him the viewer's attention. But once the viewer's eye is on Langella it stays on Langella through the scene, even though he is now out of focus. Reitman has underrated the interest and magnetism of Langella's expression. Kline plays his usual amiable self. Weaver does what she can with a role that gives her very little to do until late in the film.

_ D_ a_ v_ e is a light, pleasant film in the style of Frank Capra that may be a bit politically simplistic. The view that there is corruption in high places is undoubtedly true, but the view that a simple non-politician using intuition could do better than an elected President is questionable. There is some hypocrisy in this populist pseudo-President who wants programs that will increase Federal spending but who at the same time cheats on his own taxes--a rather wry touch in Gary Ross's script.

Still, it is fun to see over two dozen celebrities and commentators on government affairs commenting on this new President. The most enjoyable cameo features Oliver Stone. And one more nice touch: Kline's rendition of the song "Tomorrow" from "Annie" is the first time I could ever make out all the words.

While not startingly original, _ D_ a_ v_ e is fun and well-made. I give it a high +1 on the -4 to +4 scale.
