

This is Rowbazzle, the Wind-Swept Fanzine, coming to you from Fangorn House on the Wind-Swept Slopes of the W-S Sierra Madre Mountains. June M. Konigsberg at the W-S Helm, 480 Fairview Avenue, Sierra Madre, ELvenhome 6-1615. A Fangorn Press Publication.
*****

Well, winter has given its typical token at last--the first major windstorm of the season came ravening down off the mountain slopes (where it was manufactured for the purpose) last weekend, blowing off hunks of trees, and in my case dozens of avocados, just like I said once before. With some of the howling gusts that shook the house, I wouldn't have been particularly surprised to wake up and find myself on the way to Oz.

As it was, when I went out to survey the damage in the morning light, I had the distinct impression that something was missing. I finally decided it must be that the big avocado trees in front had lost their leaves--approximately 50% thereof. Which were neatly piled up against the front of the house--in the planter. I may just leave them there as mulch. (Mulch sounds so much neater than leaf-litter.) Either that, or blacktop the whole area. Now there's an artistic idea--a pile of avocado leaves, preserved in imperishable (?) blacktop! Yarst!

District of Confusion

Table of Contents - Since when is Bruce Pelz one of the back-room boys? And a translation of some of those autographs would be appreciated.

A Fanzine 4 Tommy Turtle - Does your '66 Mn'aalt Mn'ouse have a new-style M'tah horn, or is that last year's model?

Fred Whitledge - Your "Macbeth" is absolutely delightful. I wish I could have read it in that form first--it makes it so clear!

Dave Fox - Your Khorlian script seems to have a certain resemblance to English--I can almost make out what it says in some spots, like "Forry Ackerman", frinstance.

Thomas Digby - Not only is that custom not common on my part of the mainland, I never even heard of it. In answer to your second paragraph, I would say "no". Re your third paragraph, it is plain to see that when you DDD, you don't fool around with neighboring districts, you go for broke! From the way they divided the area, apparently that section of North Florida is not quite so thickly populated as the smaller area that remained 305. Or was it 304? I forget, and the phone book isn't handy.

How do you pronounce XTABAY? Why, just like it's spelled, of course.

What To Do - Your little hoax-critter is straight out of Dogpatch! (Joe B--? Whatsisname?)
But you forgot the little black clouds.

5/8 - Doc Savage came first, by a matter of some few years, f'evvensakes! (This is probably the one-hundred-and-twenty-seventh time you've been told this since last week, at a minimum guess.)

Barry Gold - Very sharp, sir. It so happens that the ditto whose brightness dazzled you WAS a Ditto Brand master, with the pressure at 4. Maybe I'll try 3 for this edition, but 1 and 2 don't seem to give much of anything.

Lasfuss - Correction--it seems to be the Year of the Bat!

This is Howeasle, the Wind-Swept Plains, coming to you from Parsons House on the Wind-Swept Slopes of the W-S Sierra Madre Mountains. June M. Knappberg at the W-S Main, 480 Kaitiava Avenue, Sierra Vista, Kivachone 6-1015. A Parsons Press Publication.
*****

Well, water has given its typical token at last--the first major vibrations of the season came raveling down off the mountain slopes (where it was manufactured for the purpose) last weekend, blowing off banks of trees, and in my case down on avocado, just like I said once before. With some of the howling gusts that shook the house, I wouldn't have been particularly surprised to wake up and find myself on the way to Dr.

As it was, when I went out to survey the damage in the morning light, I had the distinct impression that something was missing. I finally decided it must be that the big avocado trees in front had lost their leaves--approximately 50% thereof.
Which were neatly piled up against the front of the house--in the planter. I say
"Just leave them as such." (Which sounds so much nearer than last-summer.) Either that, or blacktop the whole area. How there's an artistic idea--a pile of avocado leaves, preserved in imperishable (?) blacktop? Yikes!

District of Columbia

Table of Contents - Since when is Bruce Fair one of the back-room boys? And a translation of some of those autographs would be appreciated.

A Fainting + Tommy Tuttle - Does your '66 M'rait M'ouan have a new-style M'rain horn, or is that last year's model?

Fred Whitledge - Your "hobbit" is absolutely delightful. I wish I could have read it in that form first--it makes it so clear!

Dave Fox - Your Iberian script seems to have a certain resemblance to English--I can almost make out what it says in some spots, like "Torry Acharman", reference.

Thomas Dicky - Not only is that custom not common on my part of the mainland, I never even heard of it. In answer to your second paragraph, I would say "no". He your third paragraph, it is plain to see that when you say "no", you don't feel around with neighboring districts, you go for broke! From the way they divided the area, apparently that section of North Florida is not quite so thickly populated as the matter was that remained 305. Or was it 304? I forgot, and the phone book isn't handy.
How do you pronounce KIBAHAN? Just like it's spelled, of course.

Walt To Do - Your little box-eriter is straight out of Dreyfus! [Joe B--? What's that?
Not you for the little box-eriter.]

2/8 - Doc Savage came first, by a matter of some few years, I've learned! (This is probably the one-hundred-and-twenty-seventh time you've been told this since last week, at a minimum guess.)

Betty Gold - Very sharp, six. It so happens that the dico whose pictures detailed you was a Ditto brand water, with the pressure at 4. Maybe I'll try } for this edition, but I don't seem to give much of anything.

Lastness - Correction--it seems to be the Year of the Bat!