FRED PATTEN: only you could make 'A Fanzine for Don Simpson' into 'A Fanzine for Et Menel Utúlien'....

JACK HARNESS and others: since I don't have the in-group knowledge to write a decent Labyrinth story, I purposely distorted the logic pattern of Labyrinth in that story (by making the Lab into a space ship). The only purpose was to galvanize Jack, which I seemed to have accomplished. Your story is excellent, altho there is a noticeably lack of plot.

FRED HOLLANDER: maybe the Fellowship of the Ring exists, but are they doing anything? Besides collecting money from people and issuing cards.. You ask of the Little Men? If you happen to be in the area I advise you stop by and visit me instead. They meet on alternate Fridays at locations known only to card carrying members (they send postcards out every other week telling where the meeting is to be). It's usually at the Anderson's, but with them in Europe, it could be anywhere. But I can't really imagine you or the Little Men having anything at all to say to one another. It's a completely different fandom, and a completely different world. To you or someone who asked how old I am, I'm 16, and my mimco is an ABDick 416.

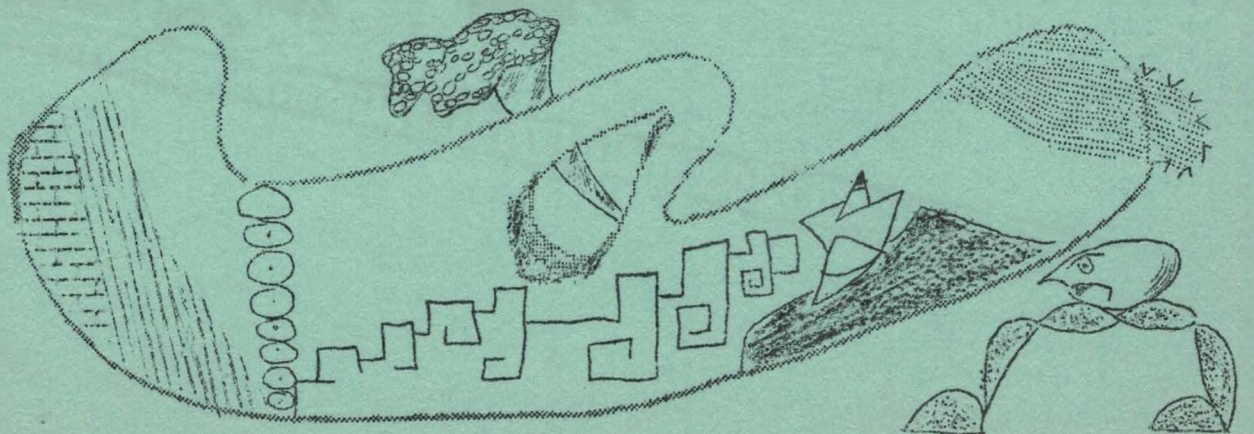

SEX: If you talk about it you're obscene, if you do it you're a sinner, if you don't do it you're queer, and if you do it differently you're perverse...

This issue's quote: 'Nobody goes there anymore because it's always so crowded.'

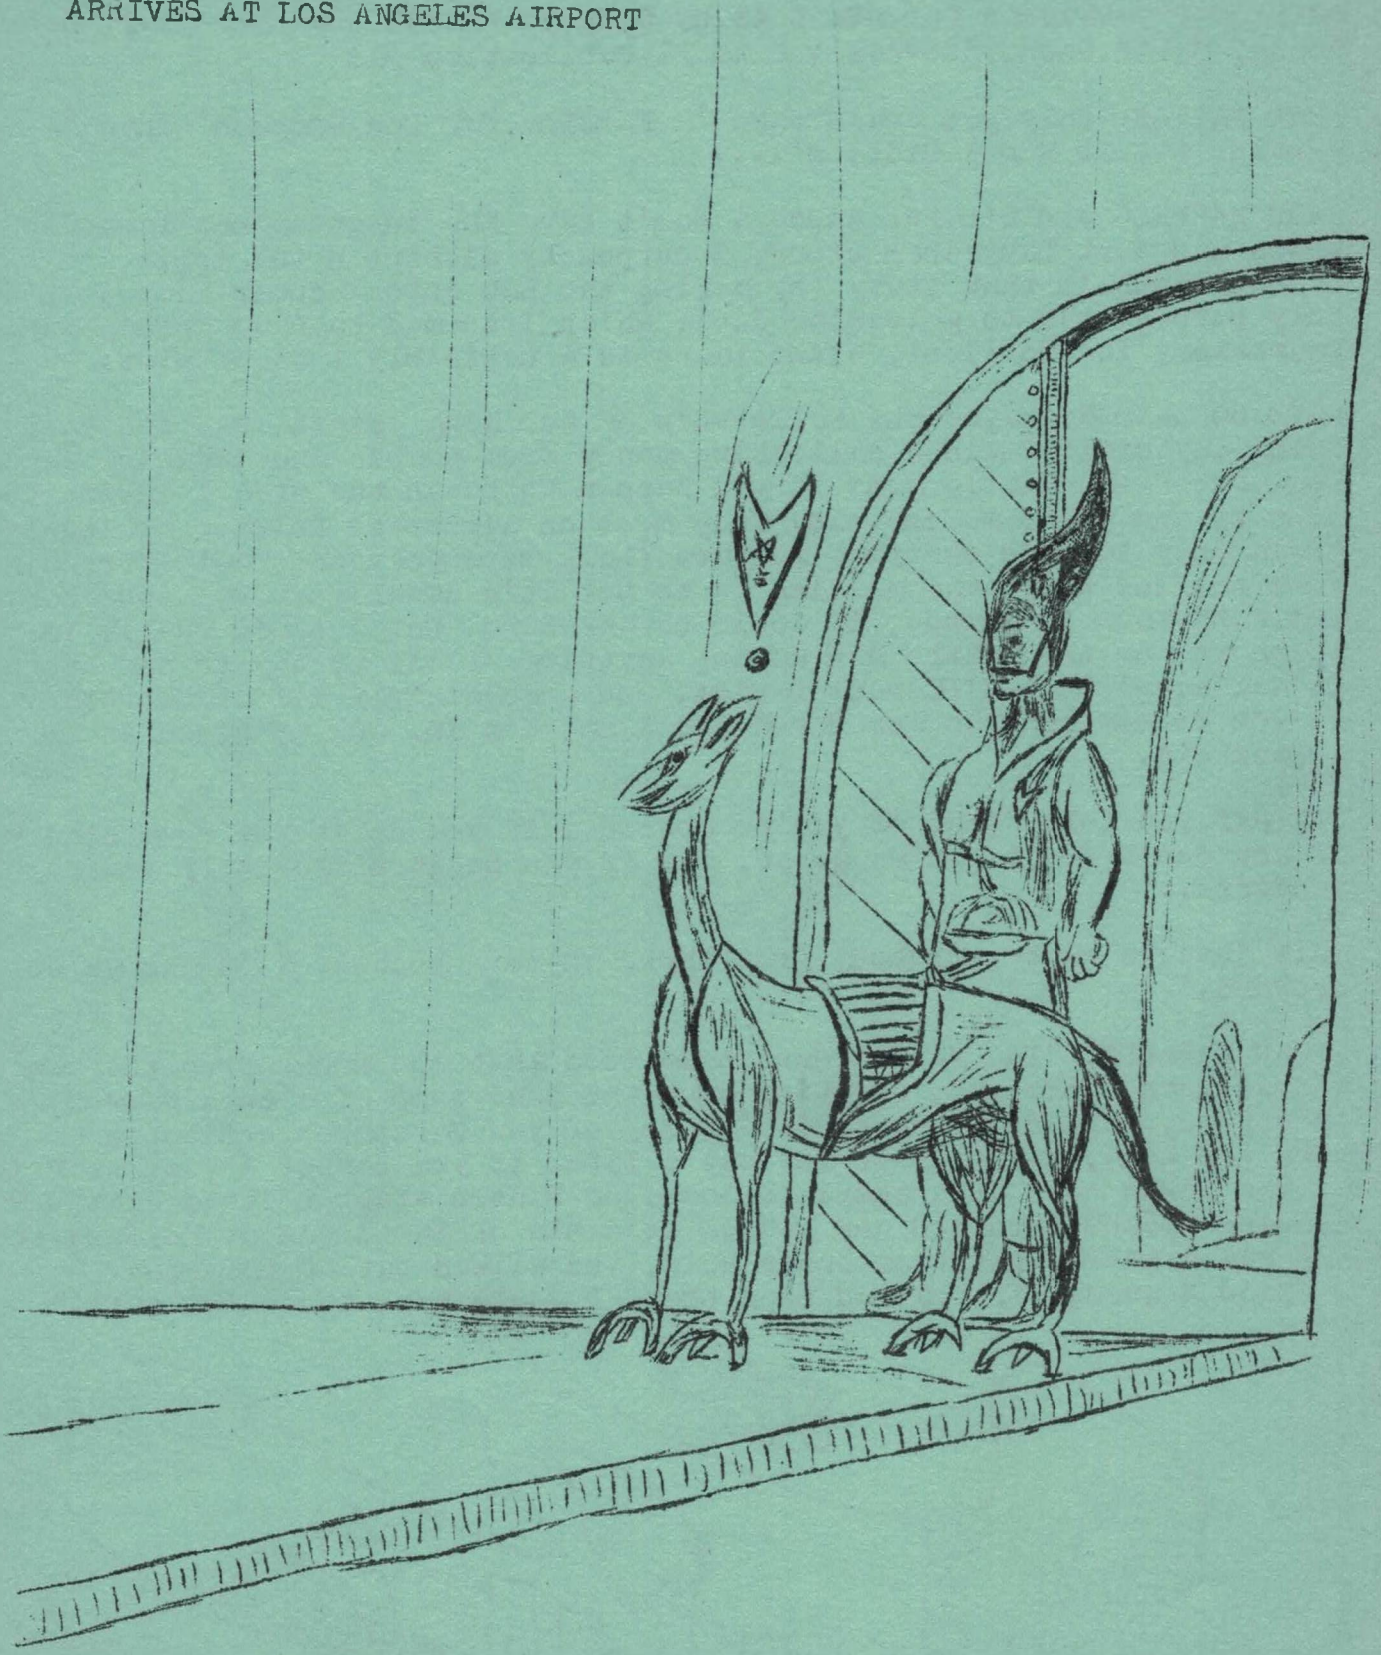

A ZEN PARABLE: "The Master Nansen noticed that the monks from the eastern and western halls were fighting over the ownership of a cat. Nansen, therefore, seized it and said: 'If any of you Brethren can speak a word (of Zen), I will save the cat's life. If you cannot I will stab it.'

The monks were at a complete loss, so Nansen stabbed it to death. That evening Jyōshū returned and Nansen told him of the incident. Jyōshū took off his sandals, put them on his head, and walked out of the room.

Said Nansen, 'If you had been there I could have saved the cat.'"
